Theory
Wu Yun ‘Five Movements’

- 运 Yùn ‘Movement’ (Cosmic, Circulatory Phase, Cycle or Period)
- 岁运 Suìyùn ‘Annual Movement’, 大运 Dàyùn ‘Great Movement’

- Determined by the yearly heavenly stem
- Influential climate over the entire year - Wind, Heat, Damp, Dry or Cold
- The 太 Tài ‘Major’ and 少 Shào ‘Minor’ notes of the Chinese pentatonic scale are traditionally used to represent the movement

- 阳 stem years are termed 太过 Tàiguò ‘Excessive’ and are associated with more violent climate changes from the host damaging the controlled element.
- 阴 stem years are called 不及 Bùjí ‘Inadequate’ the host is weak and the deficiency leads to an excess of the controlling element

Liu Qi ‘Six Climates’

- 气 Qì ‘Climate’ (Climatic Factor, Atmospheric Influence)
  - Determined by the yearly earthly branch
  - Meteorological changes in upper and lower halves of the year - windiness, imperial heat, ministerial fire, dampness, dryness, and coldness
  - Correspond to the 六經 Liùjīng ‘Six Warps’ - degrees of yin yang in the body, correlating with channels, directional physiology and pathology
- 主 Zhǔ ‘Host’ (natural season) & 客 Kè ‘Guest’ Qi
  - Descending from above for whole year / 1st half of year is the 司天 Sītiān ‘Governing heaven’ Qi.
  - Joining from below in the 2nd half of the year is the 在泉 Zàiquán ‘Residing fountain’ Qi.
